Verdict Summary

Exceptional psychological safety, ego-free ownership, and cultural alignment. When an outage occurred, she owned it publicly without shifting blame, conducted a retro, and instituted a lasting pre-deploy checklist. Openly acknowledged resume limitations.

Identified Strengths (3)

- [T-A7] Directly took full ownership of production prompt outage in retro without blaming lack of review process
- [R-EXP-04] Proactively introduced permanent pre-deploy checklist with eval set following incident
- [T-A3] Self-discloses multi-agent gap transparently rather than bluffing

Identified Gaps / Concerns (1)

- [T-A5] Pushed prompt change directly to production without review causing two-hour outage

Contrarian / Devil's Advocate Argument

While her incident handling was textbook, pushing unreviewed changes straight to prod shows past recklessness with guardrails; also, spending 6 years in one company might mean slower cultural adaptation to high-velocity early-stage startup friction.
